

Stewart Castledine was the star attraction in the packed-out Legends Lounge for the Chairboys' 3-0 win over Huddersfield Town on Saturday, recounting stories from his two spells with the club including the run to the FA Cup semi-final in 2000/01.

The popular former midfielder returned to Adams Park with his wife - TV personality Lucy Alexander - to reminisce about days gone by and also to watch their son Leo in action for the Terriers, having joined the Yorkshire club on loan from Chelsea in the summer.

Sadly for Leo, his game was curtailed by injury in the first half, and the club wishes him all the best for a speedy recovery.

Stewart plans to be back in HP12 this coming Saturday, reuniting with team-mates from the squad that made FA Cup history for the Blues 25 years ago, with spaces still available to book to join them.
